

DUBLIN & THE

Dublin

Dublin is famous for a long list of things you won't find any where else. Hit the highlights Dublin Castle, St. Patrick's Cathedral and the Gaol prison, and then head to Trinity College to see the Book of Kells in the Long Room Library. Afterward, pop into Christ Church Cathedral to hear the magnificent choir or see the work space of the artist Francis Bacon.

Recommended Hotel: Brooks Hotel

Galway

Galway is known as the "most Irish of all Irish cities", a place where you can still hear the lilt of ancient Gaelic and the sounds of traditional music. Connemara, in County Galway, is a romantic landscape of rusty peat bogs and desolate coastline. There are ominous black lakes and soaring mountains, untamed wilderness and quaint villages.

Recommended Hotel: Lough Inagh Lodge Hotel

Limerick

From great food to rugby, amazing graffiti art to a castle that looms over the skyline, there's plenty to discover. To begin with, Limerick is committed to culture -- both the traditional and the modern. The city has revamped its quays and riverside walks, beefed up its culinary scene and has a pub on the Irish Whiskey Trail.

Recommended Hotel: Kilmurry Lodge Hotel

Killarney

While the town is full of charm, it's best known as the gateway to the Ring of Kerry. This sublime drive is chock-full of pristine lakes and waterfalls, rugged woodlands and a skyline of soaring mountain peaks. Visitors have been coming here since Victorian times to travel this winding coastal road with its brooding views and historic treasures.

Recommended Hotel: Killarney Park Hotel

Dingle Peninsula

See the mysterious beehive-shaped huts built by 7th century monks or head to Slea Head to watch the sea crash into the cliffs. Visit one of Ireland's best-preserved early churches and trace the ancient history that is left in stone. After a pilgrimage around the Loop Trail travelers are sure to be thirsty; and with the country's highest pub-per-person ratio, there's always a bar nearby.

Recommended Hotel: Dingle Benners Hotel

For booking, contact:

