

MUNICH . NUREMBERG . BERLIN

1. Munich

Thomas Wolfe called Munich a "German dream translated into life." This is especially true during Advent season when carols spill from the Gothic cathedral and shoppers sip mugs of warm mulled wine. Imagine a 100-foot Christmas tree and an ice rink where giggling children glide beneath the stars against a backdrop of the snow-capped Alps.

2. Nuremberg

As the nights grow longer and a chill fills the air, Nuremberg comes alive with cheerful festivals, theatre openings and streets strung with golden lights. Stroll the winding streets in search of Bavarian treasures or explore the city's darker history. Just make sure to spin the brass rings on the Schoner Brunnen for good luck.

3. Berlin

As the once-divided city of Berlin reunites itself, reminders of the past remain. Vendors sell what they claim are chunks of the Wall as visitors flock to see the Brandenburg Gate and the remains of the Iron Curtain. See for yourself the imposing Reichstag or the city's rich art collections, reorganized and once again at home in Berlin's museums.
